OUR BLOGGER OF THE OCTOBER MONTH.....

CHANGE IN INDIAN EDUCATION SYSTEM

We all might have often heard our parents sharing their childhood stories and telling us how different their schooling system used to be compared to us. From traditional classroom teaching methods to E-learning and the rise of Ed-tech start-ups has disrupted the Education sector. Moreover, the pandemic has accelerated the change in the education system by replacing the National Policy on Education framed during the Rajiv Gandhi era in 1986. Even though the education system has evolved over the years, there are still huge challenges faced by the Indian Education System, due to which it isn't showing much progress. Why are we struggling to provide our students with quality, student-centric and skill-based learning?

The primary reason is rote learning. There is no doubt that rote learning is one of the biggest challenges our education system is currently dealing with. When children are brought up in an environment that only praises good grades and excellent marks, then the children solely work for the output either by hook or crook. We Indians have a crazy obsession with marks and grades. If we take a moment and think about who is at fault, then, in my opinion, the answer is the system. Generations after generations, people have been taught that high grades and marks are the keys to success, and they were made to believe that it was right. As a result, we were all stuck in this never-ending vicious cycle. Therefore, this thought has been so deeply ingrained in our society that nobody questioned it so far, and even if a few did and voiced their opinion a few decades ago, there wasn't much change. It is only in the last decade that we as a country have started recognizing the importance of taking a holistic approach in the field of education. We have now started encouraging upskilling- reskilling, encouraging talent, taking a risk, and exploring limitless possibilities. Most importantly, if there is someone or something with the power to change the scenario of the Indian Education System, it is the – Education Policy. The Skill Gap issue India faces a massive problem of skill gaps. Even though India produces lakhs of graduates every year, only a chunk of them manage to get placed as they have the relevant skills required for the job role.

According to the Global Skill Gap Report by Udemy, 92% of Indian employees believe there is a huge skill gap in the country. Whereas, 76% have admitted that the issue of skill gap has personally affected them. Therefore, we must encourage skill-based learning.

WORLD OF KNOWLEDGE

ARYABHATTA

- He was a fifth century mathematician, astronomer, astrologer and physicist.
- At the age of 23, he wrote Aryabhattachiya which is a summary of mathematics of his time.
- First time he had calculated the value of pi at 3.1416.
- He showed that zero was not a numeral only but also a symbol and a concept. Infact the discovery of zero enabled Aryabhata to find out the exact distance between the earth and the moon. And zero discoveries opened a new dimension of negative numerals.
- Also, Aryabhata contributed greatly to the field of science particularly Astronomy and so known as Father of Astronomy. As we all know that in ancient India, the science of astronomy was well advanced. It was called khagolshastra.
- He also disregarded the popular view that our planet earth is 'Achala' i.e. immovable; Aryabhata stated its theory that 'earth is round and rotates on its axis'.
- He also explained that the appearance of the sun moving from east to west is false by giving examples. Like when a person travels in a boat, the trees on the shore appear to move in the opposite direction.
- Scientific explanation of solar and lunar eclipse was also explained by him.

- CHARAK

- He is known as Father of ancient Indian Science of Medicine. In the court of Kanishka he was the Raj Vaidya (royal doctor).
- His remarkable book on medicine is Charak Samhita in which he had given various description of diseases and gives methods of identifying their causes as well as method of their treatment.
- He was the first person who talked about the digestion, metabolism and immunity.
- He also knew the fundamentals of genetics.

Don't you find it fascinating that thousands of years back, medical science was at such an advanced stage in India?

VARAHAMITRA

- He had made great contributions in the fields of hydrology, geology, maths and ecology.
- First scientist to claim that termites and plants could be the indicators of the presence of underground water. Infact he had given important information about termites (insects that destroy woods or dimak) is that they go very deep to the surface of water level to bring water to keep their houses wet.
- In his Brhat Samhita he had given earthquake cloud theory which has attracted the world of science.
- In the history of science he was the first to claim that some "force" might be keeping bodies stuck to the round earth. And now it is known as gravity.
- He also proposed that the Moon and planets are lustrous not because of their own light but due to sunlight.
- His mathematical work included the discovery of trigonometric formulas. Moreover, he was the first mathematician to discover a version of what is now known as the Pascal's triangle. He used it to calculate binomial coefficients.

Do you know that he had predicted the discovery of water in Mars around 1500 years ago?
